MANY RAILROADS REFUSING TO CARRY OUT PROVISIONS OF BALTIMORE SETTLEMENT

Several Roads Continue To Take Back Their Former Employees

Estimated That As High As
50,000 Have Resumed
Their Old Positions

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)
CHICAGO, Sept. 18—With numerous railroads of both eastern and western groups continuing to ignore the Baltimore settlement plan, several roads today restored jobs under the Warfield-Jewell truce to shop men who laid down their tools and quit their posts 88 days ago.

Estimates on the number of strikers taken back into the shops today varied. Some estimates by railroad and union officials placed the number as high as 50,000.

B. M. Jewell, head of the shop craft organization, hastened to New York yesterday when the plan struck a snag of eastern opposition, notably on the New York Central lines. The situation on the New York Central lines was caused by demands made by strikers in addition to the original peace terms.

Railroads which refused to enter the Baltimore agreement insisted today that they are daily increasing the number of new employees and that conditions are steadily improving.

Hearing on the Daugherty injunctions was resumed in Judge Wilkerson's court today with only four days remaining before the expiration of the temporary restraining order, September 21. The remaining four days are to be given over to the defense and final arguments.

EFFORT BEING MADE TO RESCUE MINERS

Crews Of Men Are Working
Day And Night In The California Mine

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)
JACKSON, Cal., Sept. 18—The opening connecting the Kennedy mine with the Argonaut workings, where 47 men have been entombed 22 days, has been enlarged to the full size necessary for the passage of the rescue crews, it was announced officially at 6:45 this morning.

The great force of the draft blowing from the Kennedy mine into the Argonaut mine indicates that there is no cave-in on the 4200-foot level of the Argonaut, the rescue officials declared.

Crews of men were holding the ventilating doors on the 3600-foot level of the Kennedy closed in order that the drafts would not rekindle the fire in the Argonaut.

Engineers at the mouth of the mine said at least 24 hours would be required before the first body or rescued miner could be brought to the surface. Several days may be required for exploration work before any bodies of men are found.

Apparatus teams, with four men to each team, headed by a captain, took the places of the rescue crews. The men wore two proto-oxygen breathing apparatus. Each captain carried a cage containing a canary bird and burning candle in order to detect the presence of poisonous gases. The two teams were the first to begin exploration work in the Argonaut mine. Oxygen was sufficient to last only two hours.
